

At the pre-arrest bail stage, the court is required to consider whether the accused has been able to make out a case for further inquiry into his guilt. The grant of bail is the rule and refusal is an exception.

Further, where the accused shows that the case requires further inquiry, the court should lean in favour of granting bail rather than detention.